Car: Driving to Brighton from London takes approximately two hours, depending on traffic. If you're driving, you can park at one of the many car parks in Brighton, such as the Brighton Centre car park or the NCP car park on Grand Parade.

Brighton Beach: No trip to Brighton would be complete without a visit to its iconic beach. The beach stretches for miles along the coast and offers stunning views of the English Channel. You can relax on the sand, go for a swim, or take a stroll along the promenade.

Brighton Pier: Brighton Pier is a historic pier that juts out into the sea. The pier is home to a variety of attractions, including an amusement arcade, rides, and restaurants. You can also take a walk to the end of the pier for panoramic views of the city.

The Royal Pavilion: This magnificent palace was built in the early 19th century as a seaside retreat for King George IV. The palace is a stunning example of Indo-Saracenic architecture and is open to the public for tours.

Brighton Lanes: The Lanes are a network of narrow streets that are home to a variety of independent shops, cafes, and restaurants. You can find everything from vintage clothing to unique gifts in the Lanes.

Brighton Museum & Art Gallery: This museum houses a collection of art and artifacts from around the world. The museum's collection includes works by Picasso, Monet, and Turner.

- If you're visiting Brighton on a weekend, be sure to book your train or bus tickets in advance.
- Brighton can be crowded during the summer months, so if you're looking for a more tranquil experience, visit during the shoulder season (April-May or September-October).
- Brighton is a very walkable city, so you can easily get around on foot.
- There are a number of free things to do in Brighton, such as visiting the beach, walking along the promenade, or exploring the Lanes.
- Brighton is a great city for foodies, with a variety of restaurants and cafes to choose from. Be sure to try some of the local seafood dishes.

Brighton is a vibrant and charming coastal city that offers a wealth of attractions for visitors. Whether you're looking for a day trip or a weekend getaway, Brighton is the perfect destination. With its stunning beaches, historic charm, and thriving arts scene, Brighton has something to offer everyone.
